“Cephalopod Biology Research in the 21st Century—A European Perspective”

Vico Equense, Napoli, Italy

April 7–10, 2011

Abstracts published in the following pages have been contributed to EuroCeph 2011 meeting. We thank the Editor in Chief, Sandra Shumway for her enthusiastic support and the Editorial Board and Publisher of Journal of Shellfish Research. We thank EuroCeph Program Committee and Local Organizers: Paul Andrews, Ludovic Dickel, Graziano Fiorito, Giovanna Ponte and Nadav Shashar.

This publication is funded by the non-profit association CephRes-ONLUS (www.cephres.org) aimed to support the advancement of biological research with particular reference to cephalopods and to facilitate this animal model in scientific multidisciplinary research.
