The following resolution was adopted:

HOST RESOLUTION FOR THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF MAMMALOGISTS

WHEREAS the 92nd annual meeting of the American Society of Mammalogists was held in Reno, Nevada, 22–26 June, 2012; and

WHEREAS in a show of fiscal conservatism and in order to keep our expenditures at 4.5% of the Reserve Fund, stretch limo rides from the airport were restricted to Society officers; and

WHEREAS the smoke and mirrors and games of chance in the casino inspired our budget discussions; and

WHEREAS the Peppermill Tower provided rustic field mammalogists with lessons in tasteful décor and fine Italian art; and

WHEREAS after several hours of scraping with their Swiss army knives, mammalogists were disappointed to discover that all that shiny gilt trimming wasn't real gold; and

WHEREAS sleek black telephones were provided next to the toilets in the bathrooms so mammalogists could quickly call room service if they ran out of toilet paper; and

WHEREAS trays of tempting bait located in each room were electronically linked to invisible snap traps that captured your credit card; and

WHEREAS before he knew it, Secretary-Treasurer Ron Van Den Bussche unwittingly blew half the Reserve Fund on a can of smoked almonds and a Kit Kat; and

WHEREAS the affordable, low-budget meal plan consisted of swiping candy bars from the golfers in the next meeting room; and

WHEREAS honoraria winners Mark Elbroch, Eliécer Gutierrez, and Nathan Upham showed us that mucho cool science is being done in South America, but raised the important question: once guinea pigs have dispersed around the Cordillera de Merida, does the ringing of their cell phones increase the risk of predation from pumas, or have some clades learned to set them on vibrate? and

WHEREAS Nate Upham showed that a six-foot-tall student speaker shows no fear of a menacing Mike Mares, so Janet Braun is negotiating with the next meeting host to have trap doors installed behind the podia at plenary sessions; and

WHEREAS Justin Lack discovered that sometimes it's hard to identify a rat, and Brett Pasch reminded us that for castrated males, the trill is gone; and

WHEREAS when Joe Cook was caught lurking around The Edge on Rogue Saturday Night, he claimed, "I was just trying to recruit new members! They look like our type!" and

WHEREAS at the 2013 meeting, a pre-meeting workshop on how to get the most out of your smartphone will be taught by Robert Baker; and

WHEREAS President-elect Ed Heske's presentation to the Board on ideas for membership retention went on for so long that by the time he was finished we had lost another 20% of our members; and

WHEREAS, after the 2nd Board meeting, it was resolved that Heske really needs to lay off the 5-hour energy drinks; and

WHEREAS, to alleviate our declining membership, no current ASM members will be allowed to leave the Society for any reason until they have fostered at least 2 college-aged children that become Life Members, and our senior members are encouraged to join a new online-only category of AfterLife Members; and

WHEREAS, Twitter sounds like something for ornithologists, so ASM is creating our own limited-text media called Growl, where instead of Tweets, mammalogists can send each other Grunts and Snorts; and

WHEREAS, in an effort to speed up our time from submission to publication, the number of Associate Editors for JM was finally made equal to the number of annual submissions; and

WHEREAS, after President Mares got lost in the casino and suggested we might want to move the picnic indoors due to high winds that felt to most of us like a gentle breeze, we're starting to wonder where it really was that he did his field work all those years; and

WHEREAS, inspired by the surrounding Tuscan statuary, the program committee made a taxi pick-up sign the focal point of the group photo; and

WHEREAS wildlife observed in the casino included several cougars and a sabretooth; and

WHEREAS, George "The Hammer" Feldhamer said to heck with Joe Grinnell, his academic ancestry goes back to Aristotle; and

WHEREAS, to remind them of the surrounding Sierra Nevada, mammalogists were treated to simulated long, narrow canyons with high red walls and curious corkscrew-shaped trees; and

WHEREAS, many mammalogists discovered that if they got bored with the technical sessions, they could attend a wedding; and

WHEREAS Enzo Eliaga-Rossell and Ruben Barquez inspired us with actions for mammalian conservation that were truly heroic; and

WHEREAS, we take a moment to send our best wishes to our stricken comrade, Tom Kunz; and

WHEREAS, after much gnashing of teeth and philosophical debate, the members of ASM concluded that the sky wasn't falling, actually it was a quite beautiful blue, and we look forward to those interesting times ahead;

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the American Society of Mammalogists meeting at their 92nd annual meeting in Reno, Nevada, 22–26 June 2012, gives its warmest thanks to Janet Braun, Tony Ballard, and the ASM Program Committee for taking a gamble and organizing a memorable and fun meeting.
