

Turtle Poetry

Source: Chelonian Conservation and Biology, 8(2): 227

Published By: Chelonian Research Foundation and Turtle Conservancy

URL: https://doi.org/10.2744/1071-8443-8.2.227

BioOne Complete (complete.BioOne.org) is a full-text database of 200 subscribed and open-access titles in the biological, ecological, and environmental sciences published by nonprofit societies, associations, museums, institutions, and presses.

Your use of this PDF, the BioOne Complete website, and all posted and associated content indicates your acceptance of BioOne's Terms of Use, available at www.bioone.org/terms-of-use.

Usage of BioOne Complete content is strictly limited to personal, educational, and non - commercial use. Commercial inquiries or rights and permissions requests should be directed to the individual publisher as copyright holder.

BioOne sees sustainable scholarly publishing as an inherently collaborative enterprise connecting authors, nonprofit publishers, academic institutions, research libraries, and research funders in the common goal of maximizing access to critical research.

Editorial Introduction. — This section is devoted to poetry involving turtles, representing either reprinted previously published or new unpublished material. We encourage our readers to submit poetry or songs for consideration, either their own material or work by other authors. Poems may be submitted to Anders G.J. Rhodin at Chelonian Research Foundation [RhodinCRF@aol.com].

Our desire is to share with our readers the beauty and wonder of turtles as expressed through the art of the poem or song. In the sense that the relationship between man and turtles is multifaceted, so too is turtle poetry. The poems we publish here will reflect that complexity, from poems of pure admiration for the creatures themselves to others reflecting the utilization of turtles and their products. Some poems will reflect man's use of the turtle for sustenance, others will stress man's need to preserve and protect turtles. Some will deal with our emotional interactions with turtles, others will treat turtles light-heartedly or with seeming disrespect, but all will hopefully help us to better understand both the human and the chelonian condition, and remind us that the turtle holds a sacred place in all our hearts.

Chelonian Conservation and Biology, 2009, 8(2): 227-227

FALLEN GIANTS

MARK SUMMERS<sup>1</sup>

"Big-is-always-better", notably so when picking fruit If fruit is giant tortoise big, picking's awfully sweet And so it went for the behemoth isolationists When they met Man on voyage of exploration Or should that be voyage of exploitation Seychelles, Galapagos, Mauritius all 'discovered' And all held creeps of prehistoric laggards Dilly-dallying browser/grazers that could but crawl Their comedown, though, was not a question of speed Rather, their culinary value; stowed away, ever ready Viande fraîche to be served up on some distant wave Or rich tribute to he who got castaway on their isle Their isle, found, became routine port of call Their plenty became our plenty; while it lasted Twenty Indian Ocean giants down to just one wild Capable of an inning we humans but dream of Yet we cut theirs horribly short Leaving but a few spent shells Emptied of existence.

But one example: Cylindraspis inepta Saddle-backed Mauritius Giant Tortoise Extinct ca. early 1700s Mauritius, Indian Ocean

BEAT THAT!

MARK SUMMERS<sup>1</sup>

Biggest, fastest, furthest-travelling, deepest-diving Heavyweight champion of the sea-turtle tank Twelve hundred pound meandering behemoth Butterfly buoyant floater; sting-resistant prizefighter Built on the backs of many a medusan corpse Built with bony plate-embedded rubbery wetsuit Taking, and surviving, nearly-Polar-Bear-dips Spied from Norwegian north to antipodeans' Kiwi south Wafting a wingspan greater than Wandering Albatross Bravely battling on while the dinosaurs collapsed And now faced with Man, the fiercest enemy of them all Rookeries raped throughout Malaysia: gutted! Eggs snatched before the Big Dule might restock Mortal struggles lost to the longliner's ravening hook Lives forfeit to the driftnet's take-all death chamber High Seas under threat from boat-bound highwaymen Great Pacific Garbage Patch spinning lethal deceit Plastic deceiving you as jellyfish lookalike treat Luth, you're swimming against a strengthening tide Tide of 'incidental' loss, tide of blatant desecration Time for me, Everyman, to stop and think And decide, should you swim or sink?

Dermochelys coriacea

Leatherback, Luth, Trunkback Turtle Extant: 26,000 – 43,000 nesting females Status: critically endangered Cosmopolitan: tropical to sub-polar seas

Editorial Comment. — These poems arrived by email one day—as so many now do—testament to the passion and personal needs of so many to express themselves in poetry when describing the plight of turtles. I've walked that path myself, composing several poems to celebrate and capture the essence of turtles and their need for preservation and protection. The author, a scientist like so many of us, has reached into his inner space to find and express beauty and rhythm in the poetic description of these inspiring animals. The inspiration and passion shown by people like him is inspiration in itself. Would that there were more of us in the world who lament the loss of species and the natural world—would that there were more of us to stand up for the preservation and protection of species and habitats, and to fight for the survival of our natural world and all its beauty and diversity. Would that the rest of the world felt as we do…

<sup>1</sup> Both poems composed March 2009. Submitted 27 July 2009 as part of a pre-publication poetry book on the Sixth Extinction. Printed here with permission of the author.